...ja alkoivat laulaa

*...et elles entonnèrent un chant
...and they began to sing*

for accordion solo 2015

They walked side by side, mother and daughter,
against a wind that made junipers bend and the snow and their hemlines rise wind lashing their chests One could no longer think of summer and birds Suddenly they both squatted and gave birth to gaping baby girls whom they covered with snow so they would not freeze Then they lay down by the newborns and began a summer hymn As they were through with the first verse the mother's mother appeared from upwind she lay down between the babies and joined the singing

Rauni Magga Lukkari
English translation by Kaija Anttonen

Sooloharmonikkateos "...ja alkoivat laulaa" on harras, mutta toiveikas tunnelmakuva saamelaisen runoilija Rauni Magga Lukkarin runosta "He kävelivät rinnan" (Äitejä, tyttäriä, 2013). Runo kuvaa maagisella tavalla pohjoisten naisten rohkeutta ja sukupolvien lujaa keskinäistä sidettä. Monikerroksisen musiikin keskellä kulkee kaikille suomalaisille lapsuudesta tuttu "Suvivirsi", jota myös runon päähenkilöt yhtyvät laulamaan. Teoksen tilasi Teoston tuella Festival de Musique Classique d'Uzerche ja se on omistettu harmonikkataiteilija Vincent Lhermet'lle.

"...ja alkoivat laulaa" ("...et elles entonnèrent un chant" en français) est une vision d'espoir profondément contemplative décrite par le poème "Soai vácciiga buohtalaga" de l'anthologie Árbeeadni (2013) de Rauni Magga Lukkari, poète same. Ce poème illustre aussi bien la force des femmes du nord que les liens solides qui unissent les générations. Au milieu d'une polyphonie d'airs musicaux se distingue un cantus firmus reprenant le célèbre hymne scandinave "Summer Hymn", que les protagonistes du poème sont invités à chanter. Cette pièce a été commandée par le Festival de Musique Classique d'Uzerche, avec l'aide de Teosto, et elle est dédiée à l'accordéoniste Vincent Lhermet.

"...ja alkoivat laulaa" ('...and they began to sing') is a contemplative yet hope-filled vision based on a poem by Sámi poet Rauni Magga Lukkari, 'They walked side by side, mother and daughter' from the anthology The Time of the Lustful Mother (2013). The poem evokes a magical image of the strength of women of the North and the powerful bond between generations. Buried at the core of the multi-layered musical texture is a cantus firmus, a hymn well known in the Nordic countries as the 'Summer Hymn'; this is mentioned as being sung by the characters in the poem. The piece was commissioned by the Festival de Musique Classique d'Uzerche with support from the Finnish Composers' Copyright Society Teosto and is dedicated to accordionist Vincent Lhermet.
